

Nicola Campbell-Clause

Call: 2010

Overview

Nicola is a recognised specialist in all aspects of medical law and personal injury. She draws on this experience in her professional liability work, where she specialises in claims arising out of allegedly mishandled litigation.

Described as “incredibly detailed and very strategic”, Nicola is often praised for her clear and comprehensive advice and her empathetic approach to clients. She is recognised for her knowledge of complex procedural matters.

Nicola is instructed by both claimants and defendants and sees this as an advantage in advising on tactics and when representing clients during settlement negotiations.

Medical law

Nicola has a wealth of experience in all aspects of clinical negligence. She is much in demand for complex cases in matters ranging from missed diagnosis of cancer to hypoxic brain injuries. She is recognised for her trial advocacy and for achieving impressive results in settlement negotiations. She is particularly sought after for advice in relation to tricky procedural issues.

Some of Nicola’s reported cases include:

- Shaw v Stead [2019] EWHC 520 – a GP claim relating to a delayed diagnosis of cauda equina syndrome
- Bot v Barnick [2018] EWHC 3132; [2019] EWHC 3704 – separate applications dealing with a strike-out of a claim, alleging negligent misstatement by a doctor, and issues relating to expert evidence
- Doyle v Habib [2021] EWHC 1733 – a claim relating to informed consent for liver surgery

Nicola is identified as a leading barrister in clinical negligence, by both Legal 500 and Chambers, being described as “great counsel to have on your side”.

Personal injury

Nicola has a wide range of experience of personal injury claims, including workplace accidents and occupiers’ liability. She has particular expertise dealing with high-level claims arising out of road traffic accidents, often relating to catastrophic and life-changing injuries.

Nicola is regularly asked to advise in relation to all aspects of quantum ranging from credit hire disputes to complex care packages and accommodation claims.

Professional liability

Nicola has experience of a broad range of professional liability matters. Drawing on her expertise in other practice areas, she is particularly in demand in relation to claims against solicitors arising out of (alleged) mismanaged personal injury and clinical negligence litigation.
